USSVI Creed:

Our organization's purpose is . . .

"To perpetuate the memory of our shipmates who gave their lives in the pursuit of their duties while serving their country.

That their dedication, deeds and supreme sacrifice be a constant source of motivation toward greater accomplishments. Pledge loyalty and patriotism to the United States of America and its Constitution.

In addition to perpetuating the memory of departed shipmates, we shall provide a way for all Submariners to gather for the mutual benefit and enjoyment. Our common heritage as Submariners shall be strengthened by camaraderie. We support a strong U.S. Submarine Force.

The organization will engage in various projects and deeds that will bring about the perpetual remembrance of those shipmates who have given the supreme sacrifice.

The organization will also endeavor to educate all third parties it comes in contact with about the services our submarine brothers performed and how their sacrifices made possible the freedom and lifestyle we enjoy today."

First: Bravo Zulo to those who were able to attend and assist with the services for Shipmate Harold Weber at the National Cemetery, the family was very appreciative. We also had another shipmate pass, Karl Bergstrom. Shipmates, rest your oar, we have the watch!

I attended the 2019 USSVI national convention in Austin, Texas and discovered there is someplace with more road construction and crazier drivers than here in the Phoenix area, not to mention that there are so many "trees" that you have trouble figuring out just where the torn up roads are going or went in the past. Being from Texas [many years ago] I had been to the ALAMO many times, done the River Walk in San Antonio, and been to Fredericksburg and the Admiral Nimitz WWII museum, so the tourist part of the trip did not interest me but I'm sure those there for the first time were suitably impressed. As far as USSVI business, there was not much of significance, but the fact that the 2020 convention will be in Tucson in AUGUST, with a request from Tucson Base for assistance from Perch Base. If you are able and interested please contact myself, Jim Denzien or Vic VanHorn.

We are coming up on the fall parade season and several Veteran's Day static displays; watch the "Midwatch" and / or the Flash Traffic's for locations and times. On that subject, The Anthem / Daisy Mountain parade has designated the Perch Base Submariners as the "Grand Marshals" for their parade so come ride in the parade and enjoy the recognition.

With October being just ahead, we again are looking at membership renewal. Please respond as soon as you receive the renewal notice and if possible, make a contribution to Perch Base or the Perch Base Foundation. Help make Jim Andrew's job just a little easier.

membership@perch-base.org

Currently we have 183 members in Perch Base. Let's get down to business. As I mentioned on the September 14, 2018, we are about to start our annual membership renewal drive for 2020. As most of you already know, you will be receiving your renewal letters in the mail. Read the letter very carefully as there have been changes.

You will also receive a Dues Return Slip. Fill out the sections that apply to you. Tear off the right-hand side of record and mail the larger portion along with your dues/donation payment in the envelope I provided for you. If you have any further questions, give me a call and I will help where I can. If you are not a life member of either National or Perch Base, you must renew your dues for both National and Perch Base. The cost has not changed: National dues is $25; and Perch Base is $10. The process is easy and needs to be completed by December 31, 2019. If you fail to get pay your dues on or before 12/31/2019, I will be forced to remove you from the Perch Base Membership. This is something I do not want to do. I really get no pleasure it. Again, I am available if you need help or have any questions. For those of you who were not at the General meeting missed the announcement of my resignation as Membership Chairman. Joan Miner, Carl Miner's (COB) wife will be taking over. The actual date will be announced later.

Sometimes, especially during the summer months, it doesn't seem like Perch Base SubVets has much activity, but when I look at the changes and additions to our website, I realize there has been a lot happening. Since the last MidWatch, I have added photos of Prescott Parade photos (We were the winning entry in the "Fraternal / Church / Non-Profit" category!) and an update to the Agent Orange information for 'Blue Water' ships (including submarines) during the Vietnam War on the homepage. Since the Submarine Service Vietnam activities were primarily 'Blue Water,' they were previously excluded from Agent Orange evaluation by the VA. (See SubVet_News-2019-030.) I also added several items to the Glossary recommended by a visitor to the webpage. Additional updates included a pitch for help with Davy Jones' yard sale, a reminder for the Base Scholarship deadline on July 31, the District Commander election window, and an article about the Base's 24th birthday and a promotion for the "Pinups For Vets" charity recommended by Rick Simmons at the July meeting. Based on input from the Gudgeon Base Commander, the date listed for the Gudgeon Base Picnic was updated to Saturday, September 21. A photo was added of Jim Andrews as a Sun City West Posse member, scholarship presentations, Dr. Tim Sekosky's diabetic foot care presentation, pictures from the USSVI National Convention in Austin, TX, Eternal Patrol notices for Karl Bergstrom and Harold Weber, a photo of Captain Noreika doing a Hula Dance, and Tim Moore at the Submariner Meeting in München (Munich), Germany. If you haven't seen these photos, I suggest a visit to the website or our Facebook group page.

During the past 3 months, there were 3,554 page views on the Perch Base website during 1,424 sessions by 876 users based on Google Analytics.

If you use Facebook, we have 55 of our members that are also signed up our Facebook page, "Perch Base, United States Submarine Veterans Inc."

As always, if you have photos or suggestions for the website, please email them to me at webmaster@perch-base.org.

Navy Pushes To Slash Repair Times, Get Ships To Sea Faster; Creates New Position

Paul McLeay, Breaking Defense, September 16

THE PENTAGON: We don't know who it will be yet but the Navy is creating a new position, deputy assistant secretary for sustainment, to make sure more ships are fitted out and ready to leave port on time after they come in for repairs.

Last year, only 16 percent of the Navy's workhorse guided missile destroyer fleet managed to get through planned repairs on time. Those slippages have forced combatant commanders to keep tired crews and worn-out ships on patrol for longer periods of time. Those extended deployments on patched-together ships in many ways helped set the conditions that led to accidents like the twin tragedies in 2017 that saw the USS John S. McCain and USS Fitzgerald collide with commercial ships, leaving 17 sailors dead.

While Navy officials insist the backlog is improving, the new deputy assistant secretary for sustainment will be tasked with keeping that trend heading in the right direction. Navy acquisition chief James Geurts told reporters in his Pentagon office Friday afternoon he envisions the new office working as the "synchronizer" between the service's logistics, maintenance, research and development, and sustainment arms, keeping the various offices moving in the same direction.

"Where there are opportunities or things we need to do here at the secretariat level, this will make sure the sustainment functions throughout the Navy and the Marine Corps have an advocate and can help accelerate those," he said. The idea is to draw the different back-end functions closer together "so we can ensure we're fully leveraging all the things we're doing in science and technology and R&D to help sustainment, taking lessons learned from sustainment into new construction so that we don't have handoff issues there."

Vice Adm. Tom Moore, head of Naval Sea Systems Command, added that the number of destroyers getting out of their repair availabilities on time has shot up to 40 percent this year, due partially to new contracting methods that have allowed shipyards and industry to plan more efficiently for coming work.

"Six out of the next eight DDGs will be one time so we're headed in the right direction there," Moore said, chalking up the better performance to a closer discussion between maintainers, the defense industry, and fleet commanders, along with a push to give industry more lead time to prepare for when ships would come in to dock.

Until recently, shipyards did not know from one ship availability to the next if they would win the contract for repair work, meaning they would wait to hire workers until they received a contract and a ship was ready to pull in.

“What we found was, industry was reluctant to hire so their hiring always lagged behind the work,” Moore said. “The other piece was, the fleet would give us a deployment schedule, and we would then build the maintenance schedules to exactly meet that, and then we would look at the workload of the port and often see that it was completely overloaded.”

The solution to smoothing over these tensions was to have deeper conversations with fleet commanders about schedules and where to do the work, rather than just plugging in data and trying to smooth it out later. This has created a more free-flowing discussion between the operational commanders and the maintainers and logistics arm of the service about what is possible, and what kind of work to do and where.

Thanks in part to the new fixed-price contracts the Navy is awarding, “if you win, you’re going to win availabilities over a 2 to 4 year period head-to-toe, so you can then go and make capital investments, and you can hire,” Moore said.

The moves have given shipyards better visibility over work schedules. Over the past three years, employment at shipyards has risen from 33,800 to 36,100.

The push to turn ships around more quickly isn’t just to keep fleet and combatant commanders happy; it’s a key part in the Navy’s plan to reach its goal of a 355-ship fleet in the next several decades. Budget realities being what they are, it’s just not possible for the service to simply build its way to 355. Instead, the admirals have long recognized they’ll have to extend the lives of dozens of ships — and do so at a time when shipyard space and capacity are already stretched.

As Geurts pointed out, the service is about to kick off “a generational-level of submarine work,” building new Columbia-class subs and performing major upgrade work on existing Virginia-class boats at the same time. The two programs share a single industrial base, and their interwoven schedules present a difficult logistical issue for the Navy as, beginning in the early 2020s, plans call for shipbuilders to churn out one Columbia and two to three Virginia subs per year.

Those builds come as the Navy is also building two more Ford-class aircraft carriers, and deciding how it can also begin building a new class of frigates, and a number of large unmanned vessels. There’s a lot of shipbuilding to be done in the coming years, but there’s also work to be complete.

A Hula dancer came to where Perch Base USSVI Life and Holland Club Member Captain Dick Noreika lives, to perform for the residents. Book Review: Standing Watch
Author: Johnathan Li-Chung Leung
by Herb Herman

This is a unique book written by a Tour guide on the USS Blueback (SS-681).

There is little about spooks and a lot about what the submariners on the Blueback experienced. The boat is moored behind Oregon Museum Of Science and Industry (OMSI) in the Willamette river, Portland, Or. You can get to it when visiting, by a ramp, come on down when in the neighborhood. The volunteers maintain the torpedo tube doors, Sound system which replicates Whale, Shrimp and Diesel noises. Also, there are some overnight sleepovers by scouts.

The maintenance volunteers are there on Monday AM normally. It was a test boat having the tear drop shaped hull, but diesel powered. One of the B Girls.

Three people passed during the writing of the book and Johnathan was able to preserve a portion of their life. There is some short stories as to how we wound up in the Navy and Submarines. Also, it is filled with memories that will have you laughing out loud but no one around you will know why. Here is an example from Collie Collins a former Marine and Corpsman. It is an Escape tower experience. "I felt sorry for the shorter guy. Collins happened to be one of the shorter guys. "When we went through the chamber, I am the shortest guy and had to get two guys to support me. And I am up there saying who wants to be first?" I had to go or else I would drown!" you will find these personal experiences though out the book. There are a few old photos and yours truly is there standing watch on the USS Baya (AGSS=318).

A little more about Jonathan, he is an excellent writer and would have made a good Submariner. I have heard be told all sub sailors are half crazy. I am totally crazy as I qualified in subs and retired as an Air Traffic controller, the other half. Well Jonathan is 3/4 crazy He isn't a qualified submariner but understands what made us tick during the Cold War and is now a Journeyman Air traffic Controller at Honolulu CERAP.

If you would like to look at the book, I will bring it to the next Perc Base meeting.

A reminder during the membership renewal drive to please verify that your contact information is correct, including your point of contact information.

Now something no one likes to talk about, but is extremely important, please make sure your loved ones know to contact us in case of any hospitalization or passing. As past events have shown we only know if someone tells us and it does no good to find out days or even weeks afterward. Contact any base officer and we will get the information to the proper people.

The reason the Air Force, Army, Navy and Marines bicker amongst themselves is that they don't speak the same language. For instance, take the simple phrase "secure the building":

The Army will post guards around the place.

The Navy will turn out the lights and lock the doors.

The Marines will kill everybody inside and establish a command post.

The Air Force will take out a 5-year lease with an option to buy.
